~ Udbodhan Patrika ~

The idea of a periodical magazine is conceived by Swami Vivekananda in the 1890s, while he is abroad working night and day to spread the message of Vedanta and infuse fresh life into his sleeping motherland. He realizes that a periodical is the best way to take Sri Ramakrishna's word to the masses in an effective, enduring manner. Around 1894-1895, Vivekananda writes to his brother monks, Swami Brahmananda and Swami Ramakrishnananda, urging them to find a way to start a magazine – preferably bilingual – that would serve as a tool to educate and inspire the masses to rise up and build a new India. India, then being a British colony, was sorely lacking in any kind of social strength or mass moral character. This magazine had to fill up a gigantic vacuum.

Information for Authors :

We accept original articles and poems for publication in the Inauguration magazine. Subjects suitable for publication in newspapers include language-literature-culture, religion, philosophy, science, history, music, travel, etc. It is recommended to limit the number of words to 2500 and poems to 15 lines in writing articles.

- ✓ In case a quote occurs in an article, the author needs to mention the source (i.e. – title of the book/journal, author, publisher, edition, page number, etc.) in detail. Relevant photographs should be sent along with travelogues (photo prints necessary.) Relevant photographs can also be sent along with articles of any other nature.
- ✓ Manuscripts that are sent should be written or typed clearly and legibly on one side of the paper; DTP or Bangla typing is advisable. The author should make sure to retain a personal copy of the manuscript. We do not return unaccepted manuscripts. The last page of the manuscript should have the sender's full name, address, contact number, and brief introduction.
- ✓ Writings published or sent for publishing elsewhere are not eligible for publishing in Udbodhan. If selected, the author of writing will be contacted by Udbodhan officials. It requires at least 6 months to make a selection. The decision of the Udbodhan editorial team is final regarding the selection, editing, and publishing of the writing.
